The ACM Special Interest Group on Energy Systems and Informatics is a professional forum for scientists, engineers, educators, and professionals for discussing energy systems and energy informatics. It brings together an inter-disciplinary group of computer scientists with diverse backgrounds in sensing, modeling, optimization, control, network and systems design, and experimentation to discuss and address key challenges in future energy systems, and their impact on society. SIGEnergy covers a broad range of topics in energy informatics, energy system design, analysis, and operation ranging from building energy management, renewable energy modeling and integration, energy storage system analysis, electric vehicle modeling and optimal operation, data-center energy management, and energy impact on climate and society.

The Association for Computing Machinery (ACM) is an educational and scientific computing society which works to advance computing as a science and a profession. Benefits include subscriptions to Communications of the ACM, MemberNet, TechNews and CareerNews, full and unlimited access to online courses and books, discounts on conferences and the option to subscribe to the ACM Digital Library.
